Bartholemy Cardon, though it is not labeled as such. It was donated August 16, 2013 by Henrietta Jimenez and family, representing the descendants of Thomas Bartholemy Cardon to the Visitor's Center in a ceremony as a gift. We were able to enjoy an endowment session in the Rome Italy temple. The marble tile, chandeliers with Venetian glass, the baptistry, the art work in the endowment room is extra-ordinary. Leon Parson a descendant of Jean Pierre Stallé and Jeanne Marie Gaudin was commissioned to paint the murals in the ordinance room. See PFO Report No. 59 August 2013 for further details.

BROTHER CENA'S CENSUS AND TAX RECORDS GIVE MORE FAMILY NAMES

By R. Lavor Cardon

Background: In 2013 Giovanni Cena, our researcher, in Italy found additional records he thought would be useful in researching our Waldensian ancestors. Among these documents are tax, census, and records of Waldensians who converted to Catholicism. Governments have always been interested in raising all the revenue they could. That resulted in taxes of various kinds. The need to sustain funding led to taking a census. Knowing how many in the jurisdiction could labor allowed any ruler to better calculate how to meet expenses and maintain the desired lifestyle. The information recorded was focused on assuring the regular receipt of funds for government officials. The need for income had to be balanced with the need for enough records to assure that everyone paid their share of the load without substantially increasing the amount of money being expended to get that information. So the records weren't elaborate—and they weren't regular. Among the Waldensians, historically the annual Town Council, comprised of an annually elected major and town councilor members, plus the heads of households, made basic decisions. ("Heads of households" functioned in the biblical patriarchal mode—the father represented his sons, even grown and married with children unless one or more of them had been formally "emancipated" by the father.) The central government assigned a given amount to each community, and the assessors elected in the Town Council assessed each family's portion of the amount, based on their ability to pay—and figured out how to collect the amount. It seems that a need was felt to further regulate matters in 1628, as lists for taxing vegetables exist for many of the areas, with lists for taxing salt, grains, and animals being somewhat less widespread. Another group of such lists exist for 1698 or 1700 for some communities. Surviving Census Records (called "Bocche Umane"—literally, "Human Mouths") were used to determine how many people in a town or village could work. Thus, sometimes ages are provided, indicating not only how many could work but how hard they could labor. As noted, these records were not very systematic, and so it is recommended that you compare these lists carefully with your ancestral families. For instance, the Luserna and San Giovanni area provides lists for both 1698 and 1700. Carefully comparing those lists can help you identify a family member who may not appear in the parish registers nor in the notary records. The records are provided by town and then by the type of record: Tax on salt (Italian: sale), food (vettovaglie), grains, livestock, or census (Bocche Umane), with the year given. It's important to scan through the entire record for the locality where your ancestors lived. Some lists contain only heads of households while others include all family members. A pedigree summary where family information is available is an aid provided in the abstraction process and is not found in the original record.

Findings: In searching the 1702 Census and Tax Records of Prarostino and San Bartholomeo, Lavor has discovered the following:

Stefano Odin the son of Daniel Odin and Lidia Cardon, was married to Madalena Riviore, and they had two additional sons, who were not known before: Daniele, who was younger than 5 years old, and Giacob who was a nursing baby. Stefano also had a sister named Madalena. Daniele and Giacob have been added to Stefano Odin's family. Stefano Odin is: 2nd cousin 3 times removed through Philip Roman and Lidia Pisis and 3rd cousin 5 times removed through Pajretto Cardon and Mrs Pajretto Cardon

PLEASE DO NOT SUBMIT ANY OF THESE NAMES FOR TEMPLE ORDINANCE WORK.

JEANNE MARIE GAUDIN'S GRAVE MARKER, MOTHER OF SUSETTE STALÉ & 2ND WIFE OF PHILIPPE CARDON

By Boyd L. Cardon

This last summer I drove to Hyrum, Utah to search for the grave site of Jeanne Marie Gaudin Stalé. She became the 2nd wife of Leon Parson, who had actually found the marker years before, I had hopes of discovering the marker. However I did not find it. I was able to get the photo of the marker from Family Tree. It is my desire to update and make vital information available about our ancestors. I would like to create a fund to place a new grave marker in the Hyrum cemetery that tells the story of the life of Jeanne Marie Gaudin: her real name, her birth, marriages, and her children. Also to tell the story of her first husband Jean Pierre Stalé. If you would like to help fund a new grave marker please send your donation to PFO and specify Jeanne Marie Gaudin Stalé grave monument. Please let me know if you will help with this project.

HOW TO GET DIGITAL PIEDMONT PROJECT WORKING DRAFT FAMILY GROUP SHEETS ON LINE

By Boyd Cardon

The 43 microfilms in the FHL of the Piedmont Project working draft family group records have been digitized and are available on line and are available at: <https://familysearch.org/search/catalog/327231> The sheets are the basis for beginning research on the Waldense lines.

They have been critical in helping our researcher, Giovanni Cena, to look in the notary and public records that predate the 1700s in the Piedmont valley in Italy to gather more family names for ordinance work of the descendants of the early Italian converts from the Piedmont area.

HOW TO GET THE DIGITAL PIEDMONT PROJECT FAMILY GROUP SHEETS ON LINE

By Boyd Cardon
